

Finding Peace After the Loss of a Loved Animal Companion

A spiritual guide and practical primer designed to help people of all ages and backgrounds cope with and recover from grief over the loss of a beloved pet. Bill Atkinson, DVM Companion Animal Hospital, Denton, Texas - Not until you have experienced the tragic loss of a pet who has become a member of your family can the true depth of the grieving process be understood. This book is a must-read for anyone going through that process and it authenticates the feeling that is normal and acceptable to mourn the loss of a pet. Finding Peace is well written and illustrated, and I would highly recommend it for anyone who has lost a family companion. Joshua Grossman, MD FACP - This text is a must-read for healthcare providers, including but not limited to psychologists, social workers, medical students, physicians, nursing students, nurses, as well as divinity students and any and all members of all branches of our clergy; indeed for all who keep and hear the still, small voice of God in their hearts, their thoughts, their words and their deeds. I shall keep this text in my office for ready reference both in teaching students and in counseling the bereaved.
